

Sports

For over half a century, Weil has partnered with stakeholders across the dynamic sports industry to navigate risks and opportunities associated with the rapid expansion and growth of the sector. Our cross-disciplinary domestic and international platform has played a leading role in countless industry-changing engagements, including seminal antitrust cases that helped achieve free agency and fair competition across the industry, IP disputes that have yielded important rulings on athlete name, image, and likeness rights, and major deals and litigations that transformed the leagues we watch and the ways we interact with them.

Weil is uniquely situated to provide sports-industry clients with full-spectrum counsel on their most important, high-stakes matters:

- Longstanding and broad-based relationships with players' unions, pro athletes and their agents and marketing teams, and industry-adjacent stakeholders, including media, broadcast, sports betting, and entertainment companies.
- Deep industry expertise in important areas that feature most prominently in sports-related transactions and disputes, including antitrust and intellectual property law, employment and labor law, internal investigations, and acquisitions and dispositions of professional sports franchises.
- A robust international team that provides our clients with a combination of local-market knowledge and a high-level understanding of global economic, legislative, and legal opportunities and risks, which together enable us to advance our clients' short-term goals and long-term interests, particularly with the rapid expansion of cross-border investment and activity.

Some of our notable groundbreaking matters have included:

Washington State University and Oregon State University

Weil won a major victory before the Supreme Court of Washington State, on behalf of Washington State University and co-plaintiff Oregon State University, in a high-profile dispute regarding the future of the Pac-12 athletic Conference. The court's ruling ensures that our clients have sole control over the Pac-12 moving forward, following the announced departure of 10 members from the Conference, even as the departing members sought to continue serving on the Conference's board and influencing its governance and finances.

Following appellate briefing led by Weil, the court denied our adversaries' motions for discretionary review of a lower court's order that denied defendants' motions to dismiss and granted our clients' motion to preliminarily enjoin the 10 departing member universities from continuing to serve on the Conference's board. This is the third consecutive victory Weil has secured for its clients in this dispute, following earlier rulings in which the trial court granted our request for a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction.

Minor League Baseball Teams

Weil successfully represented a number of Minor League Baseball teams in connection with high-profile litigation, including a cert petition before the U.S. Supreme Court, adverse to Major League Baseball and several of its clubs regarding MLB's consolidation of the minor leagues, which could have resulted, absent a highly favorable settlement we reached while the appeal was pending, in a Supreme Court decision invalidating the MLB's longstanding "exemption" to the U.S. antitrust laws.

NBA All-Star Zion Williamson and Creative Artists Agency

Weil has been leading the charge before the trial and appellate courts for NBA All-Star Zion Williamson and his agency, Creative Artists Agency (CAA), in multi-jurisdictional litigation in North Carolina federal court and Florida state court against his former agent, Prime Sports Marketing (PSM). The disputes collectively implicate more than $100M.

In North Carolina, where Zion had commenced an offensive case, PSM separately filed counterclaims citing breach of contract, fraud, unjust enrichment, and misappropriation of trade secrets. In 2022, Weil won a complete summary judgment victory when the court dismissed PSM's contract-based counterclaims because the court earlier deemed the underlying contract null and void, and dismissed PSM's trade secret claims because the information PSM claimed to be trade secrets were not protectable trade secrets under NC law. PSM has appealed both decisions to the Fourth Circuit, which heard oral argument in October 2023. In May 2024, the Fourth Circuit unanimously affirmed in a published opinion, holding that the contract was illegal and void.

Meanwhile, in Florida, where Weil had already secured an appellate victory for Williamson that dismissed all claims brought against him by PSM, we won a February 2023 summary judgment victory for CAA and several other co-defendants that dismissed all claims against them, as well.

National Women's Soccer League Players Association

Weil protected athlete well-being by serving as counsel to the National Women's Soccer League Players Association in a landmark joint investigation into abuse, harassment, and misconduct in professional women's soccer.

CBS Sports

Weil represented CBS Sports in a wide range of high-profile sports media-related litigations, including, among others: multi-district antitrust class action litigation relating to the use of CBS Sports' NFL broadcasts in the "Sunday Ticket" subscription package; the "grant-in-aid" litigation resolved by the U.S. Supreme Court's Alston decision, as well as the ongoing In re College Athlete NIL Litigation, challenging the NCAA's rules prohibiting student-athletes from receiving compensation in exchange for the use of their names, images, and likenesses; a dispute with the Alliance of American Football (AAF) following AAF's chapter 7 bankruptcy filing; and a pair of major class actions filed by putative classes of current and former college athletes involving right of publicity issues.

DiracTV

Weil is counseling DIRECTV in connection with litigation and restructuring options surrounding its contractual relationship with Diamond Sports Group, a regional sports network affiliate of Sinclair Broadcasting Group that has encountered financial difficulty. Diamond operates 19 individual regional sports networks that serve as the TV home to more than half of all MLB, NHL, and NBA teams based in the United States.

Our notable areas of expertise include:

- Litigation and Investigations: Weil's Litigation team works collaboratively with clients to help achieve groundbreaking results. Drawing on our expertise in complex commercial litigation, high-stakes investigations, and global antitrust law, Weil routinely counsels clients throughout the industry, including professional sports franchises, superstar athletes, labor unions, and talent management firms in high-stakes commercial, employment, IP, and antitrust disputes in both state and federal jurisdictions, as well as in connection with sensitive investigations that play out in front of regulators and the press.
- Corporate/Restructuring: Weil provides market-leading legal services in acquisitions, strategic investments and transactions, reorganizations, and financings for clients across the global sports industry. Whether the need involves adapting to the dynamic sports media landscape or representing private capital in purchasing or investing in highly coveted global sports properties, Weil stands ready to counsel clients where it matters. Weil also has extensive experience advising clients on broadcasting rights, naming rights, sponsorship and other sports-related contractual arrangements that generate value for sports clients and their brand partners.
- Tax and Executive Compensation: Our global tax practice enables us to work with clients and private equity sponsors to navigate the challenges of domestic and international transactions. Weil's tax expertise enables us to understand the intricacies and nuances surrounding transactions involving global sports properties, as well as executive compensation matters that are critical to every sports transaction.
